Bottled up inside Muscadine Lines are the luscious morsels of 28 rich and varied voices of the South—writers who have cultivated a sense of character and place and a love of humor, as well as a love of language, and many are Tennessee Writers Alliance members.

Muscadine Lines, a collection of 28 stories and 28 poems by 28 writers, was released by Cold Tree Press, Nashville, Tennessee, in August, 2006. The book, compiled by editor TWA member Kathy Hardy Rhodes, features the works of veterans of the Franklin, Tennessee-based online literary magazine Muscadine Lines: A Southern Journal, asouthernjournal.com, also edited by Rhodes, now in its second year. The e-zine from which the book sprouted is a venue for emerging and established writers to publish and/or promote their work on the Internet.
